Chicago, Jan. 22 .- A special from St Fair, followed by snow in the northern Louis says: In all probability Jacob Schaefer, the expert billiardist and exchampion of America, will soon have to retire as a professional. His wrist, which was severely sprained by a fall from a street car in Chicago last winter is the cause. Yesterday Dr. Heber Roberts, a specialist, made a critical examination of Schaefer's wrist with the X-rays and revealed a maimed condition of the bones and ligaments condition of the bones and managements that surprised the crack roller of the ivory balls. As a result, Schaefer will amend his suit against the street car company for domaices and ask for $50,000 instead of $10,000.

Three negatives were taken of the wrist. The faind sets crooked on the wrist slanting downward toward the radial side when lying in a natural position.
